

Cosmetic Surgery for the Natural Appearance

Natural appearing cosmetic surgery is the desired objective. Your family and friends will admire your refreshed and rejuvenated look. It requires a great deal of surgical precision and artistry to maintain your personal identity while allowing you to be on the outside what you are on the inside.

Plastic surgery and art go hand in hand for Dr. Jeffrey Rosenthal, who has exhibited his artwork both nationally and internationally, is the chief of plastic surgery at Bridgeport Hospital and is in private practice in Fairfield. As a plastic surgeon he compares the steadiness and precision required in his profession to a sculptor carefully carving a piece of stone or metal into a finished masterpiece. "I love to create. The creativity is what I get a joy out of," Rosenthal said.

Watching areas our face and body start to sag, bulge or show lines of maturity can be a challenging experience. In past generations there was little that could afford relief. Diet and exercise are important components of our well-being but cannot erase or turn back the hands of time.

Advances in cosmetic surgery enable us to look relaxed, toned and healthy. Neck and jaw lines that once were clean and crisp can be smoothed or reshaped anew. Sagging skin and bulging fat around the lids that give a tired appearance are sculpted away to yield a bright and well-rested look. A wide or irregular nose is balanced to blend seamlessly with your other facial features. Protruding and sagging areas of the body caused by pregnancy or normal lifestyle alterations are lifted, reshaped and tightened.

There are many noninvasive procedures that can be performed in the office with little or no downtime. Fillers like Restylane smooth out lip lines and restore lost lip fullness, while Botox can transform the tense and wrinkled forehead into a smoother and calmer one. Let us not forget the skin. Professional skin care and products enable your face to glow once more.

Spring into a lifestyle and look that you enjoy. Be more confident and comfortable with yourself.
